Not illustrated. 1917-01-01 Excerpt: .appropriate for illustrative purposes, novels, short stories; books of travel, of biography, of modern drama, of modern poetry; weekly and monthly magazines, and newspapers. Books that are out of date or seldom used should not be allowed to occupy valuable shelf-space, but should be stored where accessible, or they should be otherwise disposed of. Books greatly in demand should be supplied in duplicate to meet the demand not only adequately but generously. For high schools not exceeding an enrollment of 1500 students, from 5000 to 8000 volumes, not including duplicates, carefully selected make a good working library. 5. Library Instruction. One of the following plans should be selected in giving library instruction: a. A minimum of three recitation periods per year should be given in each English course to graded instruction in the use of books and libraries. This instruction should be given by the librarian and credited as a distinct requirement for graduation. The credit may be recorded as a grade in English. b. To establish library instruction as a unit course it will be necessary to give a minimum of twelve lessons a year to this instruction. In view of the fact that efficiency of instruction in any department depends upon an intelligent use of the library, the following schedule would seem practicable: In English give three lessons a year to instruction in the use of the library; in history give three lessons a year; in Latin give one lesson; in German or French...
