Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Michigan's Millions of Idle Acres: Forest Library While the world suffers from a shortage of forest, products, millions of acres of Michigan land that once yielded vast width in timber are today waste lands, fire-swept and deteriorating year by year. Forward-looking, men who are wrestling with the problem believe that the people of Michigan do not realize the gravity of the situation or the possibility of remedy. Their plan is to restore to the wasted areas of this state the forest industry. The series of articles to follow will present a study of the causes and conditions creating Michigan's waste areas in the northern part of the state, and give an account of what is being done to restore them to use. P. S. Lovejoy, who contributes the first article of the series, is a member of the University of Michigan forestry faculty, a scientist and a practical woodsman of long experience. By P. S. Lovejoy Of the Forestry Faculty, University of Michigan. A third of Michigan virtually is bankrupt, unable to pay...
