Bonneville captured almost 90 average megawatts of energy efficiency in FY 2010, easily exceeding its portion of the Northwest Power and Conservation Councils conservation target. The energy efficiency team was recognized as a leader in the field with multiple awards, including three Energy Management Awards from the Department of Energy and two regional Environmental Protection Agency Awards. KEY CHALLENGES The coming years will see fundamental changes in the Pacific Northwest power system. Growing demand and increased wind power development are combining to put new strains on our transmission and power systems. Bonneville is working closely with customers and stakeholders throughout the West and looking for opportunities to meet these new demands. Energy Efficiency - The Northwest's Priority Resource The Pacific Northwest has long been a national leader in energy efficiency and...
