Not illustrated. 1830 Excerpt: .Religion s accent speaks; She fills the chasm of the soul, And gives to passion, soft controul: All other hopes are apt to fail, But hers o er time and death prevail. Why should this weak, imperfect clay Such firm assistance cast away t The glare of wealth, the glow of joy, May in the end our peace destroy; The flattering sound of fame s loud blast Deserts our pilgrimage at last; But true Religion ne er will cease To guide our souls to endless peace. 1 Perhaps to a much higher degree, for in Guernsey, the selfordained and unlicensed teacher may set up a conventicle or have his preaching and prayer-meelings; if they do not annoy or disturb their neighbours, the constituted authorities do not interfere. It appears, however, that field and street-preaching are forbidden; for on 20th May, 1826, an individual, whose name is...
