Excerpt: .have received no adequate physical training or exercise before reaching college. Their lives have been abnormal and unnatural in that, during the playing period of their lives, they have been closely confined to a line of mental processes that dealt largely with abstract subjects and that deprived them of physical activity. As a result of this method of life, muscular sizes must be abnormally small in the great majority of cases, and a table constructed from such measurements will show a man that is truly mean. To determine so far as possible the variation of the fifty per cent line on the table of Yale measurement from what might be expected in a similar table constructed from the measurements of men of a like age but who had taken a large amount of physical exercise, and who could be considered in perfect health, I selected five hundred individuals from two thousand and grouped their measurements according to the percentile method. The results are shown by the lines representing the twenty-five per cent grades, as well as the mean, that are plotted on the regular table as shown on page 88. It is believed that this new fifty per cent line represents a much more reliable standard of physical excellence than the line representing the mean of the whole college community. A glance at these lines shows us several facts: First--That the relation between bone size and muscle size varies in different types of men,...
