It has been prepared especially for the zoological part of the work in General Biology at the University of Michigan, and is expected to supplement the one lecture and four hours of laboratory work per week during the first half year. No textbook now on the market covers the field of the introductory course in Zoology as it is given at several of the leading Universities. These courses deal with invertebrate types only, being followed by a course on vertebrate types during the second half year. The animals are not treated as inert objects for dissection, but as living organisms whose activities are of fundamental importance. No arguments, I believe, are necessary to justify this method of procedure, since the so-called the course, developed with the problems of organic evolution in mind, and dealing with dynamic as well as static phenomena, is recognized by most teachers at the present time as the best method of introducing young students to Zoology.
