P. , Physician for Diseases of the Skin at St. Marys Hospital, and at the East London Hospital for Children, Shadwell. (Continued from page 411.) Rarity and distribution of the disease. --1 have compiled a table of all the cases of which I have been able to find a record (vide appendix); I owe much of the completeness of this table to the excellent bibliography published by Blumer in his paper on the subject (Monatshefte, 1902, vol. i), where he has compiled a list of 83 cases. I have added from the literature which has appeared on this subject since that date other cases, which with Blumers 83 above mentioned make now a total of 154. It is highly probable that I have missed several recorded cases, notwithstanding considerable industry expended in searching for them, so that that figure cannot be regarded as exhausting all the cases up to date; it will therefore be apparent that Urticaria pigmentosa is no longer the excessively rare disease which it has hitherto been usually described as being; but it remains notwithstanding one of the rare diseases of the skin. Possibly as a result of the circumstance that the disease was first recognised in England, or possibly because it is actually commoner here, there is a great preponderance of...
